FOR STOCK RAISERS.

Editor Ledger: Few people have practiced disorning cattle in this state, especially in Mason and adjoining counties. Although a painful operation, it not only makes the animals easier managed, but they lay on flesh more rapidly, and calves, yearlings and aged cattle can run together without injuring each other, and thrive much better. It is said that it requires 700 pounds of corn to grow the horns of a three-year-old steer.

The operation is simple and should be done when the calf is weaned or when the horns begin to show.

The risk is comparatively nothing as to loss of life in aged cattle, besides there would not be so many people gored to death or injured by ill-tempered bulls and milch cows and surely avoid the so-called disease of hollow horn in the cow doctor bores a gimblet hole in and fills with gun powder, which operation is more severe than sawing off.

The older cattle can be easily secured with a ring and pole on either side. With a fine tooth saw cut off close to the head just at the hair. The saw tears rather than cuts the blood vessels and there is little or no hemorrhage. The calves' horns can be cut off with a pair of blacksmiths' nippers.

Mr. Claybrook of the Washington neighborhood has practiced disorning for several years and has the best herd of cattle, I am informed, of anyone in the county, and has not had a single death. Disorning should be practiced by every stock raiser and all that is required to put it in practice is for some leading farmer to start it and see the good effect. The rest will follow, for it has every advantage and nothing against it. Cattle no longer need their horns as a means of defense.

FEARIS.

A sad accident took place below here on the farm of Albert Henderson Wednesday evening about 4 o'clock. George Hord of Pleasant Ridge was assisting Mr. Henderson to raise a barn when a sledge hammer flew off the handle while in the hands of Albert West, striking Mr. Hord on the head, knocking him senseless for a few moments, but revived sufficient to walk a few hundred yards to Mr. Henderson's residence where he grew worse and died at 11 p. m. Mr. Hord was a good and kind man and much respected by the community in which he resided.

COUNTY COURT MATTERS.

Items Taken From County Clerk Pearce's Minute Book—August Term.

In the absence of Judge Phister "Squire Grant was called upon to preside. Frank Ellet applied for a license to retail malt liquors at the old Crawford stand at Morganburg, but a protest being filed, the cause was continued until Saturday, the 29th inst., for trial.

John C. Fitzgerald was appointed guardian of Henry R. Fitzgerald with John R. Connelly as surety.

Brown Doesn't Mind It.

One of the big down-town stores, says The Commercial Gazette, employs a man whose sole business it is to be "roasted" by the manager and "discharged on the spot" on an average of six times a week. "These goods are not what they were represented to me," complains the customer. "Call Brown," sternly orders the manager. Brown, the employee in question, makes his appearance. "This is the third complaint against you, sir," thunders the boss. "You may draw your salary at once, sir. Your services are no longer required." The crestfallen Brown mumbles an apology and departs to "draw his salary." The lady isn't certain that he waited on her, and feels sorry that he should lose his place, but the floor-walker assures her that it's all right. It is, and Brown doesn't mind it.
